INTRODUCTION AND BACKGROUND

His Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons for Scotland (HMCIPS) is required to inspect the conditions in which prisoners are transported or held across Scotland to establish the treatment of, and the conditions for, prisoners and to report publicly on the findings. This includes prisoners, prisoner transport and Court Custody Units where prisoners and custodies are held awaiting appearance on court.

This report is part of the programme of inspections of Court Custody Provision carried out by HM Inspectorate of Prisons for Scotland (HMIPS).

These inspections also contribute to the UK's response to its international obligations under the Optional Protocol to the UN Convention against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (OPCAT). OPCAT requires that all places of detention are visited regularly by independent bodies – known as the National Preventive Mechanism (NPM) – which monitor the treatment of and conditions for detention. HMIPS is one of 21 bodies making up the NPM in the UK.

The inspections of CCUs are informed by a set of Standards as set out in our document 'Standards for Inspecting Court Custody Provision in Scotland', published March 2017 which can be found at

HMIPS Standards for Inspecting Court Custody Provision in Scotland

These Standards contribute positively to the effective scrutiny of court custody provision in Scotland and will encourage continuous improvement in the quality of care and custody of people held in court cells.

The Standards provide assurance to Ministers and the public that inspections are conducted in line with a framework that is consistent, and that assessments are made against appropriate criteria. This report is set out to reflect the performance against these Standards.

HMIPS assimilates information resulting in evidence-based findings utilising several different techniques. These include:

- obtaining information and documents from the Scottish Courts and Tribunals Service (SCTS) and the court inspected
- shadowing and observing staff as they perform their duties within the CCU
- interviewing custodies and staff on a one-to-one basis
- inspecting a wide range of facilities impacting on both custodies and staff
- reviewing policies, procedures and performance reports

The information gathered facilitates the compilation of a complete analysis of the CCU against the Standards used. A record of the evidence gathered is produced by those undertaking the inspection against each of the Standards inspected.

HMIPS takes a human rights based approach to ensure that both the standards and the principles of human rights are integrated into policy as well as the day to day running of organisations under scrutiny.

This report has been created based around a human rights based approach known as the PANEL principles, set out as follows:

Participation: participation must be active, free, meaningful and give attention to issues of accessibility, including access to information in a form and a language which can be understood.

Accountability: accountability requires effective monitoring of human rights standards as well as effective remedies where human rights breaches occur. Is there evidence of issues raised previously now having been addressed?

Non-discrimination and equality: a human rights based approach means that all forms of discrimination in the realisation of rights must be prohibited, prevented and eliminated. Are the most vulnerable and at risk identified and supported effectively?

Empowerment: a human rights based approach means that individuals should know their rights or be made aware of them. Is information readily available and support provided so individuals know their rights and entitlements while in custody?

Legality: a human rights based approach requires the recognition of rights as legally enforceable entitlements and is linked into national and international human rights law. Are the processes and procedures adopted in the CCU in line with legal obligations and human rights standards?

These are known as the PANEL principles.

Overview by His Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons for Scotland (HMCIPS)

Greenock Sheriff Court opened to the public in November 1869, with the Justice of the Peace Court opening in the same building in December 2009, providing four court rooms. As with most court buildings, the CCU was situated at the rear, with the main access from a side road controlled by automatic gates that had been damaged but were in the process of being repaired.

The CCU consisted of seven cells, and all were operational at the time of the inspection, with the capacity for the CCU given as 22. Inspectors found this to be a reasonable number. The CCU had four well-equipped interview rooms for agents visits that were continually monitored by staff. There were two courts running on the day of inspection, the Sheriff Custody Court and the Justice of the Peace Custody Court.

The CCU had five adult males and one adult female attend on the day of inspection. Three were from police custody and three were from HMPs Greenock, Stirling and Low Moss. It was noted that the CCU staff correctly placed the female custody and male police and prison custodies in separate cells. As with most CCUs located in older buildings, Greenock was unable to accommodate people with disabilities. The CCU staff had contingency plans in place that allowed a custody to be held in a room adjacent to the court with access to disabled toilets.

Inspectors found the CCU to be showing signs of wear and tear and in need of some cosmetic repairs, especially to graffiti damaged cell doors. Some cells were also found to be in need of a deep clean but otherwise it was found to be a well-maintained facility. Staff were polite and led by a knowledgeable manager who demonstrated good interpersonal skills with staff and was seen to take the time to engage with each custody brought into the CCU.

For the care and responsibility of those having appeared in court and subsequently released from custody, it has been identified that procedures differ in many CCUs and there is a lack of understanding of each agency's role. GEOAmey staff at Greenock CCU were found to hold rail warrants to issue to custodies who require them. This has not been found in any other CCU inspected to date and does not reflect the position of GEOAmey nationally in relation to the issuing of such travel warrants. Criminal Justice Social Work (CJSW) at Greenock were contacted as part of this inspection, and they were clear that they hold responsibility for the issuing of travel warrants and any other care that may be required, such as homelessness or emergency assistance payments for clothing or food. HMIPS intend to consult and obtain a definitive answer from Social Work nationally and make recommendations to ensure GEOAmey and SCTS staff are aware of what procedures to follow, and to allow the creation of effective lines of communication ensuring the care and welfare of those being released from custody.

Whilst inspectors found that the term "Handcuff Risk Assessment (HRA)" was being accurately recorded on Personal Escort Records (PERs) by GEOAmey staff at Greenock as being carried out, there was no narrative available to allow scrutiny around what decisions were taken as part of the HRA to determine if handcuffs should or should not be worn by a custody. It has been identified through this, and many other inspections, that the default position for GEOAmey staff escorting custodies appears to be that handcuffs are always applied. HMIPS understand that there is not a set list of questions to be considered to form a HRA, but that it is "dynamic" and carried out by the escorting officers at the time of the escort. This "dynamic" approach prevents an effective way of evaluating the competency of such assessments, and if handcuffs are being used excessively and unnecessarily. HMIPS intend to investigate this further with GEOAmev, and if required will make appropriate recommendations.

We note under standard two that the CCU sourced its food for custodies from the public cafe located in the court building. Providing fresh food on request reduces waste, provides choice and allows the provision of food that meets dietary and cultural requirements. This has been recognised by HMIPS as good practice.

On the PANEL principles, we found that in all areas the human rights of custodies were being actively considered.

The provider ensures that all custodies are lawfully detained. Each custody’s time in the Court Custody Unit (CCU) is accurately calculated; they are properly classified and allocated to cells appropriately. The provider cooperates fully with agencies that have powers to investigate matters in the custody areas.

	Every cell door in the CCU was found to be badly damaged by graffiti and required to be painted. The cell walls and ceilings were acceptable but would also benefit from a refresh. As can be seen in the photograph in Annex B, most cells required a deep clean and thereafter maintained to a standard to ensure a good level of cleanliness and hygiene. The CCU has contingency plans in place for custodies with a disability or mobility issues. A room could be used next to the court room that had full access, along with a disabled toilet. The CCU had three cells with CCTV fitted to allow constant observations if required. The CCU sourced its food for custodies from a small public canteen located in the court building. Food was ordered daily and was nutritional, fresh and could be adapted to meet dietary and cultural requirements. A contract was in place between GEOAmey and the canteen to provide this service and this is recognised by HMIPS as good practice.

	Standard 4 Summary
	See comments in Standard 3, and the overview, relating to the release of custodies from the CCU being adequately clothed, fit to travel and supplied with sufficient funds to travel. Inspectors noted that one of the CCTV cameras covering the CCU and the electronic security gate at the rear of the CCU was defective. Inspectors were assured that it was in the process of being repaired.

	Prisoner property was seen to be documented and retained in a secure cupboard and was released appropriately. There was no requirement for the Use of Force during the inspection. The last planned Use of Force was over three years ago and the last unplanned was in December 2024. Staff were able to show a good understanding of the law and the GEOAmev control and restraint guidance.

	Standard 5 Summary
	Inspectors witnessed staff informing custodies of their progress throughout the day and answered questions when required. Solicitors spoken to indicated that they found the facilities to be adequate for their needs and had good working relationships with CCU staff. Any conversations of a sensitive nature between staff and custodies were carried out away from other custodies to help ensure privacy and confidence in the honest exchange of information. On the walls of the CCU it was clearly displayed in both English and other languages that complaint forms could be provided on request. Staff confirmed to inspectors that they had in the past, and would always, assist any custody on request to complete such forms.
